SEMINAR NOTES

LT. COL. ROB “WALDO” WALDMAN

WINGMAN TEAM BUILDING & LEADERSHIP

What does it take to overcome fear and lead with courage when facing adversity? How can you build trusting partnerships in your personal and professional life, and live congruent with your core values? Discover answers to these questions and many more in this high-flying adventure featuring highly decorated US Air Force fighter pilot Lt. Col. Rob “Waldo” Waldman. On this critical mission, you’ll learn leadership and teamwork principles covering a wide range of areas including focus, integrity, collaboration, overcoming fear, and maintaining a commitment to excellence. Whether you’re in the cockpit of an F-16 or in a chair at your office, these same principles apply when it comes to soaring to new heights both individually and as a team.

Known as “The Wingman,” Waldo is a graduate of the US Air Force Academy and a decorated F-16 fighter pilot with more than 65 combat missions. He also earned his wings in business as a top sales producer for several companies before founding his own peak performance firm, Wingman Consulting. As author of the New York Times and Wall Street Journal best-seller Never Fly Solo, Waldo travels the world teaching others to reach new heights in business and life. As a media personality, he’s been featured on Fox News, CNN, and The Harvard Business Review. Waldo lives in Atlanta, Georgia, where he was named one of the top 40 business leaders.
